

125BC

AQUA TRIPULA brist.

125 BC

A liberal Roman leader proposed a bill to allow partial or full citizenship to all allies, but it failed to pass; and this led to armed revolt of a group of Latin colonies. Treachery delivered the leading rebellious city into Roman hands and it was destroyed.

125-196 BC

Antiochus VIII Srypus was king of Syria (Seleucid

CcX10, 125BC

Begin the Tyrian Era

125BC

The Second Book of Machabees was possibly written about 125BC.

125BC

The FRECELLAE revolted; the magistrates of Latin Rights towns and districts became entitled to assume the full Roman citizenship for themselves and their direct descendants.

125 BC

FREGELLAE.

A Latin right community situated on the VIA LATINA and the river LIRIS, just over the border in SAMNIUM. It was always very loyal to Rome until 125 BC, when it revolted, and was crushed with singular cruelty by the praetor LUCIUS OPIMIUS. Destroyed completely, the town never flourished again.

C 125A C

1912 Dates. J-BK

EUDOXUS of CYZICUS attempted to circumnavigate Africa

126 BC

DURANT

The Assembly (Rome) forbade the inhabitants of the Italian towns to migrate to Rome

126 BC

TYRIAN Era began.

129 BC, 128 BC

MANIUS AQUILLIUS put down the war caused by ATTALUS III bequest of his kingdom to Rome
AQUILLIUS sold most of PHRYGIA to King MITHRIDATES V of PONTUS for a sum of gold which he put in his own purse.

129 BC

Scipio the Younger, destroyer of Carthage died.
Born 185 BC.

129 BC

After the wars of the ATTALID succession in Asia Minor were settled, the Aegean strip of Thrace was governed as part of Macedonia, for Rome had built the VIA EGNATIA, the great highway between the Adriatic and Hellespont

129 BC

DURANT

SCIPIO AEMILIANUS was found dead in his bed apparently the victim of an assassin who was never found. Through his influence, the land board had to suspend operations.

129BC

SCIPIO AEMILIANUS died (at age 45) so suddenly and unexpectedly that it was even afterward rumored he had been murdered. The principal suspect was his wife SEMPRONIA (the sister of Gracchus) who loathed her husband.

129-125 BC

Demetrius II was king of Syria (Seleucid)

129BC

1912 Dates J-BK

Rome

PERGAMUS became a Roman province called Asia.